LAW 6930	Collaborative Law	2	Schneider	Collaborative law is a lawyering model focused on identifying the interests of all parties in a legal dispute and working to problem solve an answer reached by mutual decision rather than by the use of litigation. Through collaborative law, the parties and their attorneys commit to resolve all issues through respectful face-to-face negotiations. The model has been particularly well suited to family law matters, but is being used in many other areas as well. The approach is also compatible with alternative dispute resolution and therapeutic jurisprudence. This course is designed to familiarize students with both the theoretical underpinnings and the practical application of collaborative law principles. The course is designed as a skills course to train students in the methods of collaborative law. It is anticipated that in addition to readings and simulations, there will be guest lectures by other professionals integral to the collaborative process, including mental health professionals and financial planners.
LAW 6465	Conservation Clinic	3	Ankersen	Prerequisite: Environmental Law and/or Land Use Law (4 th semester or greater); graduate students need instructor approval and referral from affiliate faculty. This course will provide upper level environmental law students and graduate students in related fields with exposure to transactional environmental and land use professional practice, applied research and public policy analysis under the supervision of the instructor/clinic director. It will also enable students to participate in the development of novel approaches to the field application of environmental policies. Students will learn to work within interdisciplinary teams to achieve results that require a collaborative approach from multiple disciplines. Registration is by application prior to advanced registration.
LAW 6040	Consumer Law	3	Drysdale/Murphy	This course is an introduction to and survey of principle statutes and common-law doctrines protecting consumers in the American marketplace. Typical topics covered may include fraud, deceptive practices, product quality, warranties, equal access to credit, Truth-in-Lending law, fair debt collection, and consumer issues in cyberspace.
LAW 5501	Constitutional Law	4	Rush	Introduction to United States Constitutional Law. Topics include judicial enforcement of the Constitution to preserve individual liberties; judicial review; separation of powers; structure and powers of the federal government; and federalism.
LAW 5000	Contracts	4	Davis, Dawson	An introduction to the law and theory of legally enforceable agreements and promises, including elements of contract formation; consideration, effects of non-performance; conditions for relief from or discharge of obligations; and remedies.
LAW 6572	Copyright Law	3	Landers	Principles of copyright law, including protection of literary, musical, dramatic, visual art, audiovisual, and architectural works, motion pictures, sound recordings, computer programs and other digital and new technological works, and derivative works and compilations; ownership, duration, renewal, and formalities; exclusive rights and limitations; moral rights; infringement actions; fair use and other affirmative defenses; and federal preemption.
LAW 6610	Corporate Taxation	3	Jameson	Prerequisite: Income Taxation (LAW 6600). Addresses income tax topics which might be encountered by a general practitioner advising a closely held corporation and its investors. Income tax consequences of transfers of property and services to a corporation, distributions to investors, and corporate liquidations and mergers will be explored. Coverage given to tax treatment of "S Corporations," an increasingly important choice of entity for small businesses.

LAW 6063	Corporations	3	Cohn, G. Davis	Registration preference given to fall and spring entering students in their fourth full semester. Consideration of problems in organizing a corporation, disregard of the corporate fiction, control and management, derivative suits, and special problems of the close corporation. May also consider federal regulations controlling insider trading, proxy solicitations, and short-swing profits.
LAW 6052	Creditors' Remedies & Bankruptcy	3	J. Davis	Credit for Debtor-Creditor Law (LAW 6050) precludes additional credit for this course. A study of individual collection of monetary judgments and administration of insolvent estates under the Bankruptcy Code and state law. The non-bankruptcy materials cover execution, attachment, garnishment, proceedings in aid of execution and the liens and priority produced by judicial process. Bankruptcy focuses principally on liquidation proceedings and the trustee's powers to avoid transfers, with greater attention being given to business workouts when the course is taught for four credits.
LAW 6936	Criminal Law in the Virtual Context	2	Jacobs	The course will look at the emerging growth of virtual environments and the application of criminal law to activities that take place within virtual environments. Some of the issues explored will be regulation of gambling, child pornography, money laundering and other financial fraud. In addition, the class will examine how in the absence of specific laws, communities develop their own informal and informal legal codes. Any registrant in this class MUST have a computer that can meet the specifications of running the Second Life virtual platform. Specifications for the platform can be found on the website for Second Life, www.secondlife.com
LAW 5100	Criminal Law	3	Jacobs, Stinneford, Nunn, Johnston	Substantive law of crimes, including principles of punishment, elements of typical crimes, complicity, inchoate crime, responsibility and defenses.
LAW 6930	Criminal Litigation	3	Haughton	The objective of this course is to develop students' legal skills by guiding them through several of the major steps involved in criminal litigation. Criminal Litigation will be offered as a three credit course and will meet once a week for three hours. The students will be divided into prosecutors and defense attorneys. Students will be given an information or indictment charging the defendant with a crime, and describing the factual allegations underlying the charge. The first half of each class session will be devoted to lecture, video presentations, short reading assignments and discussion. The second half of each class will consist of skills development through simulation exercises. A different topic will be covered in each class. Topics will include an overview of the criminal pretrial process, witness interviewing, preliminary hearings, plea bargaining, drafting a motion to suppress evidence, other pre and post trial motions; and how to conduct a suppression hearing. The class will also cover voir dire, writing opening statements, closing arguments, direct-and-cross-examinations, objections, jury instructions and sentencing hearings. The trial portion of this course will focus specifically on criminal trial strategy and substance, as opposed to the general trial process and technique which is covered in trial practice. By walking through these steps, students will strengthen their knowledge of criminal pretrial procedure, and develop their criminal litigation skills.

Course #	Course Name	Credits	Instructor	Description
LAW 6930	Election and Campaign Finance Law	3	Jones	This course examines federal and state law regulating the conduct of elections and the financing of campaigns, two separable subjects with connecting principles and problems. Included are aspects of federal and state constitutional law on speech, association, and equal protection; state law on who gets to vote and who gets voted for; and particularly problems of apportionment, gerrymandering, race-conscious districting under the Voting Rights Act, and party governance. With respect to campaign finance, we consider how much and what kinds of legal regulation are appropriate regarding parties, candidates, independents, political action committees, corporations, unions, and individuals; the appropriate role of the courts; and the myriad of proposals to revise campaign finance law. We also look at the increasing Federal regulation of State election procedures and voting equipment following the Florida 2000 experience in "chadology," in the form of the Help America Vote Act of 2002 (HAVA). Finally, time permitting, we put these in international and global perspective. This course will have a TWEN page which you can check for updated assignments, collateral reading and other course materials, and where Power Point slides will be posted during the course. The TWEN page will be active beginning in August, 2012.
LAW 6930	Electronic Discovery	2	Hamilton	Recommended course: Evidence. Explores how the current information explosion is transforming the civil litigation process and the critical issues which arise in managing data in the civil litigation process. The course will examine developing case law and address the practical problems and issues which arise in the preservation, collection, searching, processing, and production of electronic data. The course will provide an introduction to technologies, tools, and software currently utilized in this rapidly developing specialty area. Course topics will include the varieties and locations of electronically stored data (ESI); computer forensics, data recovery, and its application in the discovery and litigation process; data preservation obligations under the amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure which went into effect on 12-1-06; the duties and responsibilities of counsel under Rule 26(f); how to prepare for and handle the Rule 26(f) conference; the preservation of attorney-client privilege in voluminous productions; the use of quick-peek and non-waiver provisions; sampling techniques; the role of experts and vendors in the e-discovery process; obtaining electronic data from 3rd parties; safe harbor provisions under Rule 37(f); ethical and disclosure obligations under the new Federal Rules; special data production and preservation issues associated with criminal and governmental investigations; sanctions for spoliation of data and other e-discovery violations; and the authentication and admissibility of electronic data at trial.

LAW 6936	Genetics & the Law	2	Rebouche	This seminar explores the regulation of genetic technologies and information. Topics of discussion include the human genome project; history of eugenics; ethics of research and public health policy; commercialization of research, including issues raised by gene patents; genetic testing, counseling, and screening; prenatal screening and preimplantation genetic diagnosis; the privacy of genetic information and related issues of discrimination.
LAW 6930	Global Corporate Compliance	2	Pillow	This course is intended to introduce the student to the legal and business issues encountered by companies seeking to ensure legal compliance as they do business around the world. The course will cover key statutes, international conventions and cases that address bribery, corruption and other compliance requirements and will also delve into "real world" case studies, typical business transactions and the fundamentals of effective corporate compliance programs. While geared to a company based in the United States, the issues apply to companies based anywhere. The principal objective is to educate students as to the critical role of legal compliance in conducting international business. Students will gain an understanding of the basic laws and receive practical guidance on advising business clients. Upon completion, students should know the basic requirements of a successful corporate compliance program. We will explore tension between strict legal compliance and achievement of business objectives.
LAW 6936	Historic Preservation	2	McLendon	This seminar will be a survey of the legal structure behind historical and archaeological resources protection in the United States. The first part of the seminar will involve lectures, readings, and discussions of federal preservation laws, including both specific federal laws (e.g. the National Historic Preservation Act and NEPA,) as well as federal programs in support of preservation (e.g. the National Register of Historic Places.) The second part of the seminar will focus on the state and local preservation structure, especially the designation and protection of individual landmarks and historic districts. A final section will consider some of the constitutional issues raised by historic preservation, including takings, due process, and first amendment issues.
LAW 6600	Income Taxation	4	Hudson, Friel	Designed to teach the fundamentals of federal income taxation in order to prepare students, as lawyers, to recognize and appreciate income tax consequences of transactions and events they encounter in general practice of law. Students are introduced to essential legal skills of learning to read and understand the language of statutes (the Internal Revenue Code) as well as that of an administrative agency (the Internal Revenue Service) and judicial interpretations of the statutes and agency pronouncements. Students who wish to take additional courses in taxation should consider taking Income Taxation in their second year because it is a prerequisite to all of the other income tax courses.

LAW 6260	International Law	3	Hernandez	Today international law is in a state of flux. Some rules are confirmed, others are ambiguous and some appear to be discarded. To a large extent, the problems of international law are foundational. Is it the law of multiple states or is it a law of everything that is politically and economically relevant in the global community? This course seeks to respond to this reality. It addresses the specific problem: What is international law? It then examines how international law is made and applied in terms of the sources of international law, namely, treaty, custom, general principles of law, judicial decisions, equity and other sources of international law. It looks at the question of the application of international law as law. The second part of this course is an emphasis on the application of the sources of international law relating to its prescription and application. This brings the student to the specifics of reading and digesting problems and working on the sources of the law to argue about those problems and to resolve them. The problems include war, terrorism, ethnic conflict and weapons of mass destruction, human rights litigation and issues of socio-economic justice.
LAW 6930	International Trade Law	3	Zheng	This course examines legal issues related to the regulation of international trade under U.S. law and multilateral agreements such as the World Trade Organization and the North American Free Trade Agreement. We will consider the major areas of international trade law affecting imports and exports of goods and services, including tariff classification, customs valuation, rules of origin, countervailing duties, antidumping duties, safeguards, sanitary and phytosanitary measures, technical barriers to trade, and export control. We will also consider certain emerging areas of international trade law and policy, including investor-state relations, trade in services, trade and intellectual property, trade and the environment, and trade and human rights.

LAW 6936	Law of Force in International Law	2	Nagan	The use of force is an important component of the use of coercion in international law. One of the central challenges for the global rule of law is the question of how to manage coercion, and in extreme form, violence that is of global international concern. This requires us to look at the tradition of seeking to manage conflict in the international environment. The seminar touches on the historic background of the problem and in particular, the emergence of the just war approaches. We examine international developments in the twentieth and twenty first century with efforts to collectively respond to the problems of unauthorized war and coercion in the global context. We then focus on the basic constitutional framework in the UN Charter concerning the problems of aggression and self-defense under the charter system. From the charter system, we explore the nature of war in conventional terms (state to state). We also explore issues of humanitarian intervention, anticipatory self-defense, and in particular, we explore the problems of civil wars using illustrations from Vietnam, anticipatory self-defense from the Middle East, U.S. interventions in Nicaragua and how that is justified in international law. We also look at the Grenada intervention, the Falkans War, the Gulf War, the Israeli-Entibbe raid, Afghanistan, Iraq and the Arab Spring. A careful analysis is given of the relevant rules of international law emerging from the UN Charter, in particular, the role of the Security Council and the General Assembly. If time permits, we plan to touch on the issue of operational law and terrorism, as well as the issue of nuclear weapons.

LAW 6936	Law & Social Movements	2	Hutchinson	This upper-level seminar will address several themes. The overarching focus of the class will consist of the exploration of historical forces that have caused dramatic changes in civil rights law. In order to examine this topic the course will present students with a detailed analysis of constitutional and, to a lesser degree, statutory law concerning discrimination on the basis of race, sex, and sexual orientation. After exhaustively covering the law in these areas, the course will examine literature from social sciences and legal theory in order to understand the historical mechanisms that influenced changes in these areas of law. Rather than teaching these changes in legal norms as inevitable or simply the product of judicial innovation, the course will consider the role that social movements played and continue to play in creating constitutional and legal change. The course will also consider whether courts respond to social movement activity and whether they should do so. The course materials will include cases, statutes, law review articles and readings from historians and social scientists. You do not need advanced training in the social sciences to excel in this course. Instead, you only need an open mind. You also need to read the materials meticulously and seek help from Professor Hutchinson if you have any questions. Also, at times during the semester, Professor Hutchinson will distribute a "Study Guide" to aid you in your comprehension of the readings. The study guides could contain questions, factual points or a mixture of both.
LAW 6752	Law Practice Management & Practical Skills	2	Marraffino	Students must be fourth-semester or later. This is a graded course. Students must complete a class project. Course covers topics such as the law firm as a business, practical skills in the practice of law, expanding practice through client and professional development, and ethical and professionalism responsibilities.  An introduction to Law Practice Management Skills to include managing your practice, your office and your time. Topics include business management, time keeping and billing, accounting, computer software and hardware technology, client development and marketing. Special emphasis on practice skills for practicing lawyers, professionalism and ethics, and balance of life issues.

LAW 6936	Selected Issues in Human Rights & Practice	2	Nagan	This human rights law seminar is based on an almost complete book of mine, which will be published by Kluwer as soon as next year. The seminar provides an overview of the idea of globalization and the specific place of human rights within this context. The seminar's first objective is to introduce you to a problem-oriented research design that facilitates research in this area. The problems, in turn, implicate the fundamental goals of human rights. Additionally, the focus on problems and goals is their decision-making implications, which requires skills in decision trends as well as the conditions of those trends. Finally, we cultivate the perspective of prediction in the form of a developmental construct, and the relevance of the creation of alternative strategies to vindicate human rights ideals. The seminar introduces you to the theory of human rights (so there is no prerequisite of previous human rights law coursework), and selects a number of issues for in-depth study. Topics include: issues of racism, anti-semitism, genocide, mass murder, torture, gender discrimination, and human trafficking. The seminar will also touch on central issues of global social justice as well as the selected number of problems dealing with indigenous human rights. If there is time, we shall explore human rights litigation in U.S. domestic law. There are no textbook requirements, as I shall be providing electronic excerpts from my book and other sources. You will be graded on class participation and the quality of your final research paper (25+ pages).

LAW 6930	Social Justice Lawyering	3	Flocks	This course will explore how those in the legal profession can work to advance social justice. It will initially examine the meaning of social justice and the variety of structural factors that contribute to inequities in the legal system. It will then explore ways in which legal assistance programs are funded and delivered to low-income and underrepresented individuals; the different substantive legal arenas in which social justice can be pursued; and the diverse ways in which individuals can work for social justice, both in and out of the courtroom.
LAW 6930	State and Local Taxation	2	Hudson	Nature and purpose of state taxation; comparison of property and excise taxes; uniformity of taxation; assessment and collection procedures; remedies available to taxpayers. U.S. and State constitutional considerations affecting state and local taxation.
LAW 6930	Statutory Interpretation	2	Fenster	The law is increasingly defined by legislative enactments. Legislators, legislative staff, and lobbyists spend much of their time struggling to negotiate and draft statutes, which judges, administrators, and attorneys then spend a significant amount of time attempting to interpret. This course focuses especially on statutory interpretation by courts, but also covers the process of statutory enactment by legislatures and statutory implementation and enforcement by executive branches. The course materials include statutes, appellate decisions, and commentary from the relevant legal and political science literature.
