LAW 6798	Advanced Legal Research	2	Turner	This course teaches strategies for cost-effective and time-efficient legal research. Covers print and electronic research sources in depth, with an emphasis on primary and secondary sources in federal and state jurisdictions. Advanced topics examined include legislative history, administrative law sources, and teaches strategies for cost-effective and time-efficient legal research. Covers print and electronic research sources in depth, with an emphasis on primary and secondary sources in federal and state jurisdictions. Advanced topics examined include legislative history, administrative law sources, and subject-specific legal research. This course supplements the first year legal research program. The course objective is to ensure that students acquire knowledge and understanding of the available sources for legal research, and the ability to develop efficient research strategies.
LAW 6930	Advanced Torts	3	Lidsky	This course focuses on several different types of torts that rarely involve physical injuries or even property damage. These torts often arise in commercial settings or setting in which the parties are not strangers to one another when the alleged tortious conduct arises. First, this course is primarily about the torts that sometimes arise when business relationships, such as partnerships, break down, or when competitive behavior is thought to exceed the bounds of what society considers fair or appropriate. The torts contained in this part of the course reflect assumptions about the role and limits of tort law in regulating competitive behavior. In this context, the course will examine the Economic Loss Rule, Tortious Interference with Contractual Relationships and Economic Expectancies, Breach of Fiduciary Duties, Misrepresentation and related torts. Most of the torts studied here predominantly result in pecuniary losses, and we will inquire whether wrongful conduct that causes solely pecuniary losses should be governed by special principles not applicable in other tort contexts. Second, this course also includes torts that cause mainly "dignitary harms." These torts include intentional infliction of emotional distress, defamation, invasion of privacy, false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, and abuse of process. Third, this course will introduce you to the so-called "constitutional torts," which allow plaintiffs to vindicate the violation of certain constitutional rights by bringing actions to recover damages against state or federal officials in some instances. Finally, we will address liability insurance, tort reform, and nontort compensation programs (if time permits).

LAW 6474	Agricultural Law & Policy	2	Olexa	This survey course is designed to provide job-ready information on a variety of agricultural and natural resource topics related to the practice of agricultural law. The focus of the course is in providing the student with real world information useful in implementing environmentally sound, socially acceptable and economically feasible field decisions involving the production of food, fiber and fuel. Topics addressed include the evolution of agricultural law and policy from its earliest beginnings through the modern farm bills. A sampling of other topics addressed include pesticide use and impact, an overview of key USDA regulatory agencies and key Florida Agricultural Laws of significance to the practitioner. Attorneys engaged in the practice of agricultural and natural resource law as well as subject matter experts will also address such topics as conservation easements, water management district permitting, wetland delineation, organic farming, crop insurance, seed law and litigation and agricultural law practice. Student evaluation will be based on class participation (20%) and the final exam.
LAW 6936	Animal Rights and the Law	2	DeCoux	This course briefly addresses the nature, sources, and effect of rights generally, followed by an analysis of current law as it affects the animals whose lives and deaths are most closely connected with human experience. By means of that analysis, students are encouraged to explore whether animals currently have rights; if not, whether they should have rights; and if they should, what those rights might be, what the source of their validity would be, and how they would be enforced.
LAW 6550	Antitrust	3	Page	An analysis of the legal, economic and policy issues engendered by efforts to prescribe standards of business conduct and preserve competitive market structures under the Sherman Act, Clayton Act, Federal Trade Commission Act and related legislation.
LAW 6930	Business Law Capstone: In House Practice	1	Sokol	This class will provide real life experiences and documents from in-house legal counsel regarding the work that they do along transactional, litigation and regulatory fronts. Each week, we will be visited by one or more guest in-house lawyers. The general counsel will lead the discussion of a complex problem for one class hour a week. The problems will be taken from practice, and the materials you will need to prepare for the discussion will be posted on TWEN at the beginning of the week. Students will need to be prepared for each discussion by reading the materials as well as understanding the core business of each company (usually through an analysis of the company's 10K and annual report). The key to the course is your diligent preparation and enthusiastic participation in the discussion.
LAW 6714	Child, Parent, and State	3	Pennypacker	Covers child abuse and neglect, juvenile justice, adoption and foster care, and discusses education and health entitlements of children and conflicts between parents and children over medical decision-making, religion, schooling and emancipation. Students will engage in exercises involving drafting and oral advocacy in a simulated child protection case.

LAW 6936	Criminal Law in the Virtual Context	2	Jacobs	The course will look at the emerging growth of virtual environments and the application of criminal law to activities that take place within virtual environments. Some of the issues explored will be regulation of gambling, child pornography, money laundering and other financial fraud. In addition, the class will examine how in the absence of specific laws, communities develop their own informal and informal legal codes. Any registrant in this class MUST have a computer that can meet the specifications of running the Second Life virtual platform. Specifications for the platform can be found on the website for Second Life, www.secondlife.com
LAW 5100	Criminal Law	3	Jacobs, Nunn, Johnston	Substantive law of crimes, including principles of punishment, elements of typical crimes, complicity, inchoate crime, responsibility and defenses.
LAW 6107	Criminal Litigation	3	Miller, Perre-Antoine	The objective of this course is to develop students' legal skills by guiding them through several of the major steps involved in criminal litigation. Criminal Litigation will be offered as a three credit course and will meet once a week for three hours. The students will be divided into prosecutors and defense attorneys. Students will be given an information or indictment charging the defendant with a crime, and describing the factual allegations underlying the charge. The first half of each class session will be devoted to lecture, video presentations, short reading assignments and discussion. The second half of each class will consist of skills development through simulation exercises. A different topic will be covered in each class. Topics will include an overview of the criminal pretrial process, witness interviewing, preliminary hearings, plea bargaining, drafting a motion to suppress evidence, other pre and post trial motions; and how to conduct a suppression hearing. The class will also cover voir dire, writing opening statements, closing arguments, direct-and-cross-examinations, objections, jury instructions and sentencing hearings. The trial portion of this course will focus specifically on criminal trial strategy and substance, as opposed to the general trial process and technique which is covered in trial practice. By walking through these steps, students will strengthen their knowledge of criminal pretrial procedure, and develop their criminal litigation skills.
LAW 6111	Criminal Procedure: Police and Police Practices	3	Nunn	Police as a social institution, including personnel, bureaucratic structure and incentives. Also covers police practices such as arrest, search, seizure, wiretapping, eavesdropping, use of informers, entrapment, confessions and lineups. LAW 6316	International Commercial Arbitration Moot (ICAM)	3	Harrison	The course is arranged around an event known as the International Commercial Arbitration Moot, which takes place in the Spring each year in Vienna. Two to three hundred teams from 60-70 countries compete. The course, offered in the Fall, includes three parts. For the first five weeks, students study the Convention on the International Sale of Goods (CISG). These are the rules governing contracts involving parties to contracts who are in different countries and the primary focus of the Moot. At the five week point in early October, the organizers of the Moot release the problem for the 2015 competition. Students, with a partner, write a brief on one side of the case. Finally, students make an oral argument based on the brief. The best 4-6 oralists are selected to represent the Law School in Vienna. This is a 3 credit course and all students passing the course receive 3 credits whether or not they are selected for the team. Forty percent of the final grade is based on a written exam at the end of 5 weeks. Forty percent is based on the brief and 20% is based on the oral argument.
LAW 6936	International Financial Crimes	2	Baldwin	This seminar will examine laws, executive orders, International agreements, and judicial decisions impacting upon national as well as transnational illicit money transfers especially within the context of terrorism funding. We will review legislation and treaties pertaining to money laundering from the United Nations, United States, and other selected states. We will devote some time to the programs in the United States, including the USA Patriot Act and judicial responses. We will also follow international governmental regulatory maturity post 9/11. The seminar paper will be a minimum of 25 pages and will satisfy the advanced writing requirement.
LAW 6260	International Law	3	Hernandez	Today international law is in a state of flux. Some rules are confirmed, others are ambiguous and some appear to be discarded. To a large extent, the problems of international law are foundational. Is it the law of multiple states or is it a law of everything that is politically and economically relevant in the global community? This course seeks to respond to this reality. It addresses the specific problem: What is international law? It then examines how international law is made and applied in terms of the sources of international law, namely, treaty, custom, general principles of law, judicial decisions, equity and other sources of international law. It looks at the question of the application of international law as law. The second part of this course is an emphasis on the application of the sources of international law relating to its prescription and application. This brings the student to the specifics of reading and digesting problems and working on the sources of the law to argue about those problems and to resolve them. The problems include war, terrorism, ethnic conflict and weapons of mass destruction, human rights litigation and issues of socio-economic justice.

LAW 6560	Securities Regulation	3	Cohn	Pre-requisite: Corporations Examination of controls and exemptions relating to the sale and distribution of securities by corporations, underwriters and others, including scope of the securities laws, registration provisions, distribution and resale of restricted securities, express and implied civil liabilities, secondary distributions and tender offers. Issues will be analyzed in context of amended 1933/1934 federal statutes, and state Blue Sky laws.
LAW 6936	Selected Issues in Human Rights Law and Practice	2	Nagan	This course provides a somewhat different and unique perspective to human rights. The course draws on both academic and theoretical insight as well as the practical experience of human rights activism. An aspect of the course is to develop the theoretical and practical foundations of human rights activism and advocacy. The course is also distinctive in the sense that it provides the student with a technical legal background of human rights, but places it in the broader context of global -social processes, and the importance of advocacy and decision making in such a context. The course provides an overview of the global constitutional system and the place of human rights in that system. The course then introduces the student to the theory and method by which we clarify human rights problems as challenges for decision and advocacy. The course then selects a number of problems in which is provided detail and analysis. These problems include a study of the Holocaust, genocide and mass murder. Additionally, a careful analysis is given of the problem of torture in the global environment and the specific challenges it poses for U.S. policy and practice. Other problems include an examination of the human rights of indigenous nations in the world community; an examination of human trafficking; an overview of the problems of human rights and global political economy. This section of the course includes a consideration of employment as a human right, whether the right to development is a human right; a consideration of sustainable development as a matter with human rights implications
LAW 6936	Sentencing Law	2	Johnston	This seminar examines the principles, practices, and policies of noncapital sentencing. While sentencing as an aspect of the legal process has been around for several thousand years, sentencing as a distinct field of study and practice is a quite recent event. The course begins by surveying the purposes that animate sentencing and the variety of institutional actors involved in its creation and implementation. We then study sentencing in more detail, focusing on the idea of sentencing guidelines and the particular guidelines in place in Florida and in the federal system. Other classes examine the peculiar phenomenon of the "real offense" and the sentencing inputs of offense seriousness, prior criminal record, and the offender's character and circumstances. The course also covers fines, probation, and collateral consequences. Students will select an area for individual study and present their research papers to the class.
LAW 6930	Social Justice Lawyering	3	Flocks	This course will explore how those in the legal profession can work to advance social justice. It will initially examine the meaning of social justice and the variety of structural factors that contribute to inequities in the legal system. It will then explore ways in which legal assistance programs are funded and delivered to low-income and underrepresented individuals; the different substantive legal arenas in which social justice can be pursued; and the diverse ways in which individuals can work for social justice, both in and out of the courtroom.

LAW 6936	Trade and Human Rights Law	2	Hernandez/ Powell	Although human rights law and trade law have developed well-established regimes through a series of negotiations on parallel tracks since WWII, there is increasing criticism from a variety of fronts that international trade rules are insensitive to basic human rights and that globalization has done little to alleviate the gap between rich and poor. Must trade and human rights regimes necessarily conflict? This seminar will explore the premises of the trade and human rights debate from the perspectives of both free trade advocates and human rights activists, with the purpose of imparting a better understanding of the rationales for both systems of law and the ways each is attempting to avoid a clash that could have profound impact on the protection of human rights and on the global market. Using actual examples from the 35 nations of the hemisphere, the seminar will examine in depth such human rights policies in the Americas as those involving conscripted child labor, sustainable development, health promotion, equality of women, trafficking, indigenous peoples, poverty, citizenship, and economic sanctions.
LAW 6576	Trademark Law	3	Rowe	Covers trademark law, with some coverage of broader unfair competition and false advertising issues. It is a combination common law/statutory class, and will provide experience in interpreting statutory language against a common law background.
